Registered version

Terms of use

Generally speaking, you need one license for every computer that the software is to be used on.

Sharing the software

Sharing the registered software with third parties by any form of “lending, selling or leasing” without authorisation is not permitted. The author of the software shall retain the distribution rights for it. Sharing the programmes without authorisation shall be deemed unlawful.

Updates & support

Updates and support are free of charge within the selected support period after purchase. Irrespective of this, the software can be used for as long as required provided that a version with a time limit has not been purchased. If the support period has expired and the update entitlement has lapsed they can be renewed at <http://www.barcode-ocr.com/en/kaufen/>.

Within the selected period you will receive support via e-mail within our business hours.

Guarantee terms

Although the software has been tested extensively, guarantee and liability claims are hereby ruled out. This is due to the wide variety of hardware and software environments that the software can be used in.

The software is supplied "as seen" without any warranty whatsoever. Neither the activities that can be carried out nor the outcomes that you can achieve by using the software or the accompanying material can be guaranteed. No warranty or guarantee, either explicit or implicit, shall be granted pertaining to the protective rights of third parties not being infringed and also not pertaining to the software being marketable or suitable or any specific purpose. Under no circumstances are we liable for direct or indirect losses, for consequential losses or special losses, including lost profit and lost savings.

None of the terms in this contract restrict the statutory rights of any party who is acting as a consumer.
